

Chat record

MH: I spend time every week with unschooled kids (a group of 30 kids aged 2-16) and the project is inspiring. Thanks Pablo and the university team!

MH: I'm curious about the process of designing with children. I'll have a closer look at the document.

MH: The website address: <https://nationalforestgardening.org>

JB: Great to hear about this all again. Amazing whats been achieved in such a short time. :)

PV: whahaha Hello Fiona! Nice to see you here ;)

PV: @Paul, inspiring to see the relational boundaries being reinvented!

PV: Would love to spread the word! I'll reach out to you soon Paul to have a chat ;)

JS: Great to see your approach!!!!

GN: Love the learning together approach, ie caring and sharing! Super

AS: Thanks Pablo, really interesting, will definitely dig deeper into this topic :-)

ES: Hello all, live Q&A will commence in a breakout session straight after this presentation so you will have the opportunity to ask Pablo and Paul any questions!

BH: I love that you are letting the kids leading their own learning with their own curiosity and questioning.

BH: In my experience the concept of forest schools in UK schools needs to be re-examined in regards to promoting eco-literacy, your work Pablo should be an inspiration for this. There is a great opportunity to build out from the forest school movement. Too of MC: Hi Paul if you can email them to me we'll get it uploaded and added to this.

MC: Paul, Pablo and Malika Cieremans are available for Q & A in th efollowing session accessed from the programme.

DR: This is great - tailoring eco-literacy to FG. Big gap with forest schools - not much on edibles.

FL: Hi Pablo and Paul, very happy to be here!

MA: Great presentation and initiative, keep up the good work!

SR: Big fan of the seminar series that the Forest Gardening scheme has put on . Also check out their website, some really useful resources

SR: @Paul - Would be nice to have a slide share from your talk

SR: @Paul. Thanks so much!

PP: I'll find out how to do that Sophie

PP: Will do Martin
